

I have listed my telephone numbers on the Do-not-Call list since it was initiated, and have also helped many others get on the list. So far, the plan to eliminate annoying telemarketers has worked to my satisfaction. The almost full reduction in these calls have given me peace of mind knowing that answering a phone call will not result in annoying, pushy, arrogant and oftentimes extremely rude conduct by telemarketers I don't want to hear from. I, as a citizen of the United States feel I have the right to privacy and protection from these telemarketers and should also have the right to select who I want to deal with and when, not the other way around.

Weakening this policy will result in constant harassment. If these companies that are looking to advance their business, there are many conventional marketing avenues available to them. Please keep these companies and organizations out of our private lives.
